

Supplementary Information

Tilapia (Oreochromis niloticus) as a Biondicator of Copper and Cadmium Toxicity. A Bioavailability Approach

Maria A. Silva,^a Tatiana C. S. Motta,^a Diogo B. Tintor,^b Thiago A. Dourado,^b Amanda L. Alcântara,^b Amauri A. Menegário^b and José R. Ferreira^{*,a,c}

^aCentro de Energia Nuclear na Agricultura, Universidade de São Paulo (USP),
Av. Centenário, 303, 13400-970 Piracicaba-SP, Brazil

^bCentro de Estudos Ambientais, Universidade Estadual Paulista (UNESP),
Av. 24A, 1515, 13506-900 Rio Claro-SP, Brazil

^cPolo Regional Centro Sul, Agência Paulista de Tecnologia do Agronegócio (APTA),
Rod. São Paulo 127, Km 30, 13400-970 Piracicaba-SP, Brazil

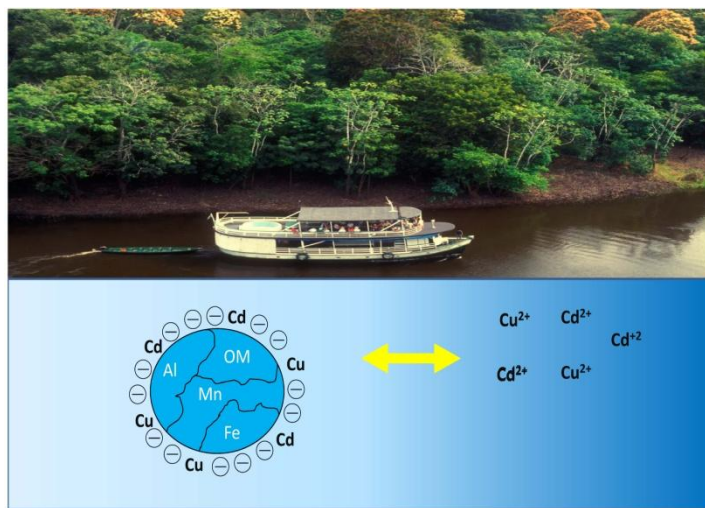

Figure S1. Aquatic colloids (1 nm-1 μm) conditioning metals availability to the biota in the water column as a function of their chemical structure and composition (the best understanding of this Figure should be obtained in Power Point, which allows to follow the dynamic of the exchange reactions between dissolved and particulate species).

*e-mail: ferreira@cena.usp.br